"The adult industry has tried to spoof Charlie's Angels a few times in the past – but never with as much energy or style as Private's Sex Angels." They go on to praise the: "beautiful women, stunning locations and more action than you'd expect to see in an adult title."

RULED BY VENUS, EARTH SIGN.

The sensual, passionate and impulsive character that Taurus bestows on feminine creatures reaches its supreme expression in Cassandra Wild. As you can see here, we've got her latest interview with two glamour journalists from a British press agency. They had to apply to her manager for a meeting some time before and then began to carry out some highly detailed research on her in order familiarize themselves with the porn diva and prepare pertinent questions about her future projects.

They searched through the clandestine press libraries in the duskier parts of London, and came across her first photosets. They worked through all her films, they studied each and every recorded performance, and traced her biographical trail through the Internet. They learnt every inch of her body to such an extent that they'd already got totally hooked on her even before meeting her. You'll really only understand just how much they got caught by her if you've watched one of her films.

On the day itself, they picked her up in the hotel lobby, and directed her swiftly to an open-topped Porsche rented specially for the occasion, in which they did a tour of the city centre. What an sensational feeling to swank around with a female of such calibre! You could see the jaws drop, and feel the stares of assassin envy! To warm up, they bought her the most expensive fur coat that Harrods could offer. Then, off to Bond Street for her to choose a pearl necklace. In Oxford Street they walked in to the most sophisticated lingerie store where they tried out the sexiest of ensembles. Of course, our journalists couldn't hold back their professional interest, as they snooped at her parts through the curtain and took shots of her pussy 'at rest', not without a smile of complicity from Cassandra herself. The three then got inebriated on arousing perfumes in another classy shop close to the statue of Eros in Piccadilly Circus. After that, a session of photos at dusk in Hyde Park, with the half-naked body of Wild flirting with the camera as she posed again and again in her mink coat. And, to cap it all, a fabulous dinner at the restaurant Bibendum: a 'menu gourmand' with six exquisite 'nouvelle-cuisine' dishes, opening with caviar and closing with lobster, all washed down with the best French Champagne. Our Taurus was now feeling wonderful, and winked at her companions she deftly hid a little caviar in her bag. What a feast! They'd managed to choose every one of Cassandra Wild's favourite things, just those very things that set her juices running. She couldn't remember the last time she'd been so beautifully treated. She felt so good that she invited them to finish the interview in her hotel room. Once upstairs, Cassandra peeled of her coat with brief but enticing striptease, and began to play with the pearls of her new necklace, making them disappear within the folds of her body. She slowly began to change her attire, giving her audience a stunning fashion parade of the sexy lingerie that they'd given her. As she let them breath in the perfume that exuded from her cleavage, the journalists' flies were burning hot and ready to burst.

Kneeling on the bed, Cassandra first unbuckled the photographer's belt, and then uncovered the rigid lens of his other camera, leaving it ready to shoot. Then she opened the journalist's pen, revealing such a thick, hard rod that she decided to hang her pearls in a rather unusual place. Now totally naked, she grasped the two instruments one in each hand, and began to polish them both in and out of her mouth. Then she took the caviar and put it in ... Cassandra's desire was that her journalists should try it in a more suitable recipient: her pussy. Once the sensational dish had been finished, and the terrain lubricated, Wild was treated to an intense session of incisive, biting journalism by the two colleagues, until one ran out of film, and the other ran out of splattering white ink. At the end, one final question: What projects have you got in store for the future?: "Well, .. just to keep on fucking!"

Destination: The industrial revolution

BACK IN TIME. SEX IN THE 19TH CENTURY

Text by Billy Holefinder

There's no better way of escaping the tedium of everyday life than by travelling in the time machine. What about the 19th century, right into the middle of the Industrial Revolution, surrounded by all those madmen with nothing better to do than invent gadgets, when everything had still to be invented? What did those pioneering mechanics think about? Did they have time to think about fucking? And what about the girls? If, as I fear, the men only thought about their gadgets, the girls must have been seriously in need of satisfaction. This last thought got me going and so I turned the time machine's ignition on. While every molecule of my body was being transported two centuries back in time, details of that famous era of discovery flashed into my mind. BBZZZZ! (matter being transported) The vision of the cosmos...BBZZZZ! Man as the centre of the universe... BBZZZZ! And the conviction that with imagination, passion and effort ... BBZZZZ! Anything could be achieved.

BOOOOOM! The miracle had happened again, and there I was in a sort of amphitheatre. The stands were filled with agitated gentlemen sporting thick bushy moustaches, sideburns and goatees, wearing top hats and clad in thick retro clothing which reminded me of my grandmother's curtains. One of them was standing on the central pedestal, gesticulating energetically with a baton as he demonstrated the technical details of a piece of equipment which a rather lovely girl was showing off to the audience. I glanced at my arms and legs and realized that I was one of the gentlemen, although luckily my beardless youth was still in its original state.

The beautiful lady caught my eye again, winking sweetly as she swayed her hips and wiggled her backside with its pompous bow. Who was she? Could she be the daughter of the inventor? Chances were that I'd come to ground in England in the 1830s, at the height of the Industrial Revolution. Everyone was involved in a heated discussion about the inner workings of something that looked like a steam machine. It might've been just a few stages on from James Watt's!

Suddenly, everybody got up and the theatre started exploding with whistles and cries of "Madman! Crazy-minded fool! Lunatic..." The arrogant scientist clearly felt offended, and stormed off to start up his invention so that he could demonstrate the real workings of his creation. The furious crowd followed after him, sweeping me along with them. I fled from the heaving mass of people, and hurled myself into a speeding horse-drawn carriage, which was taking the inventor and his loyal followers to a laboratory on the outskirts of the city. What a stroke of luck! Destiny was with me! The demonstration assistant was sitting right beside me, and I happened to sit on her hand as I fell. "Who are you, sir?" asked the mad scientist. I pretended that I was an expert in geography, ocean sciences and expeditions to far-off countries, and made it clear that I was a great admirer of his work. "Poor little thing," I thought to myself "She's still got her hand trapped underneath me and it must be getting crushed." I couldn't have been further from the truth. She kept her hand there during the entire journey. At first she quietly began to fondle my buttocks with her fingers, and then went on to tease my balls. "Ooof, watch out for the bumps in the road," I murmured. At one point the carriage stopped harshly and unexpectedly. She lurched forward just enough for me to glimpse the open fastening at the back of her skirt, and I put my hand in. That was the way into the deepest and wettest of her private parts. From then on, every bump and every creak from the carriage became a groan from the pretty lass. At last we arrived at the mansion. I was as hot as the boiler of a steam engine! There, in the courtyard of the splendid house, stood an enormous contraption hidden behind a curtain. In a trice a couple of workers in overalls whipped off the curtain and right before our very eyes we saw the most fantastic and amazing machine you could ever have imagined. It was a sort of gigantic fish made of gilded, bronzed iron with wheels and wings, positioned ready for take-off towards the moon. It looked as if it had come straight out of a Jules Verne adventure. The girl came up to me from behind, pinched my bottom with relish, and then whispered in my ear, "I can't wait for our earthly starship to explore some of the craters of the Moon."

The aristocrat turned one of the cranks of the fish, which promptly began to spit out steam as it whistled and flapped its wings. After a few minutes of action the interest of the crowd began to warm. A little door was opened up to reveal the inside of the ship. My girl and I were the last to go through. The inside was a little cabin made for two, with the walls and floor padded with soft Victorian sofa-like fabric. When everybody had finished going through the cabin, she restrained me as she shut the door. "It's very hot in here," she said unbuttoning her blouse and letting her skirts fall in a heap. While we grasped one another wildly, I heard her father giving a thousand incomprehensible technical explanations to the public. "Steam machines convert thermal energy into mechanical energy, which we can see here as the steam expands in a hollow cylinder within which is a mobile piston." I noticed how my incredible piston thrust into her damp cylindrical channel. "The alternating movement of the piston becomes a spinning movement by means of a connecting rod." Just as he described, my plunger got faster and faster, in, out, in, out, as the cylinder got more and more lubricated. "An air pump regulates the cisterns with liquid on the point of combustion." Just at this moment she rubbed up my balls to the point of explosion. Wow! "The quantity of work produced by the machine depends only on the difference in the temperatures between the boiler and the condenser. This means that the production performance does not depend on the construction of the machine, thus suggesting the possibility of perpetual movement." The idea of an eternal fuck sprang to mind – pure utopia of course – when she ripped my piston out of her and showered her face with warm sperm-filled steam. Suddenly, out of the blue, a maintenance worker appeared through a hatch. We'd been caught at it! The bloke just stared, immobile, while we carried on fucking and enjoying the whole situation. Then, with a flick of a wrist, he whipped off his soldering glasses and revealed thathe was actually a woman! Female workers were not well regarded in the 19th century but they took it upon themselves to carry the banner and break new ground in what was a man's world. Despite the narrowness of the fish, she wriggled out of her overalls with amazing ease, and deftly took up her position to join us at work. Our fellow operator tightened up the fish's nuts and bolts with her spanner whilst helping out with our party. The moment came when such dedication deserved a reward, and I drove my screw into the narrow thread of her ass. Her huge moan of pleasure coincided with an over-production of steam. The pistons were turning at such speed that the fish began to blow out in all directions. A colossal crashing noise was smartly followed by an enormous cloud of smoke, to the consternation of the inventors. It was the moment to get out fast before we got caught, or before the fish fell to pieces around us. How lucky I'd been, to have found two of those hard and fast heroines of the 19th century for whom sex was an expression of rebellion, and who contributed so much to the development of modern society, and to the emptying of my balls...
